

RRGCC's Property Rules

Climbing is a dangerous activity and should always be taken seriously. The RRGCC assumes no liability for your safety and personal property while visiting any RRGCC property. You climb and recreate on the property at your own risk.

Climbers Must Sign Waivers!

Before climbing on the RRGCC property you must sign a liability waiver. These are available online at www.rrgcc.org website.

Do not park next to oil wells. Do not block oil wells or oil workers' trucks.

Please climb responsibly and follow "Leave No Trace" practices. Please remove all refuse and bury human waste.

All dogs must be leashed or under control of their owners.

Stay off all tagged projects and do not touch or use any project ropes, draws, or other gear.

Hike on established trails and do not mark or damage trees or other vegetation. Approval by the RRGCC is required prior to the establishment of any new crags or trails.

No hunting, trapping, digging for archaeological artifacts is permitted.

No operation of motorized vehicles off established roads is permitted.

No open fires are permitted due to the oil extraction activity in the area and the enormous threat a forest fire in a region of numerous oil wells would pose.

Overnight camping (no long-term camping) is permitted as long as it is not in a climbing area, along a trail, or near any oil equipment.

Interested in Route Development?

If you are interested in establishing any new sport routes or traditional routes with fixed anchors at the Preserve, please contact the RRGCC land manager by sending e-mail to landmanager@rrgcc.org.
